2003 Rescue Program Survey Results

For the third time, the National Rescue Committee collected data from the local Golden Retriever Rescue Programs. For 2003, we list 98 programs. Sixty-seven responded to our request for information; three are "referral only" and the survey content does not relate to those programs; three were formed in 2003 or 2004; 26 were non-responsive. We believe the 26 programs not reporting are not the larger programs, implying that the data we do have, while short of the actual numbers of Golden Retrievers rescued by programs, is not 25 percent shy of the actual numbers.

We present below only part of the data. As in previous years, other information gathered will be presented topically in subsequent "Spotlight on Rescue" columns. Noteworthy is the fact that Golden Retriever rescue is now nearly a $3 million activity. Certainly all programs are appreciative of funding support from the Golden Retriever Foundation and The Goldstock Fund, but it is clear that programs are doing significant fund raising of their own. It is understood that adoption fees would not cover even veterinary expenses, much less the other expenses of managing a rescue program.

The members of the National Rescue Committee salute the 4,000 volunteers who work tirelessly for the discarded Golden Retrievers.
